California Beats Clothier and Philadelphia Downs Fottrell

In Newport Semi-finals.

Newport, R. I., Aug. 31.—Maurice E. McLoughlin of San Francisco, the playing champion, and R. N. Williams of Philadelphia, the defending champion, met in the final round of the national tennis championship today. McLoughlin, who won the title last year, defeated Williams in a straight set, 6-4, 6-3, 6-2. This was the same pair as last year, when McLoughlin also defeated Williams in the final round.

What was generally expected by close followers of the sport came to pass, for McLoughlin and Williams triumphed easily in their semi-final matches, thereby standing out above all the players who entered in the big event. McLoughlin gained his place on the outermost bracket by defeating William J. Clothier of Philadelphia, a former champion, in straight sets, 6-4, 6-3, 6-2. Williams played moved out with even less difficulty over Ella Fottrell of San Francisco at 6-4, 6-3, 6-2.

McLoughlin and Clothier were assigned to the championship court, which is surrounded by grand stands and bleachers. Williams and Fottrell were relegated to the side court, which fronts the Casino grounds. The latter pair started play first, and the crowd surged to the sides of the playing surface desirous of finding a point of vantage from which to view the contest. Toward the end of the first set, the match was a close one, and Clothier came out for their contest, and the larger part of the crowd went to the stands to see champion and challenger.

After a brief period of practice, McLoughlin won the toss and elected to take the hazard side with the sun in his eyes. The game him the best of the first two games with the sun in his eyes. He won the first game 6-4, and the second game 6-3. He then won the third game 6-2.

The Philadelphia team won along well and got an early lead of three games, much to the elation of the crowd, which seemed to be of the opinion that the California team was going to win. However, the California team won the next two games, and the match was a close one.
